2027 ANNUAL MEETING

April 11-13, 2027

EMORY CONFERENCE CENTER, ATLANTA, GEORGIA

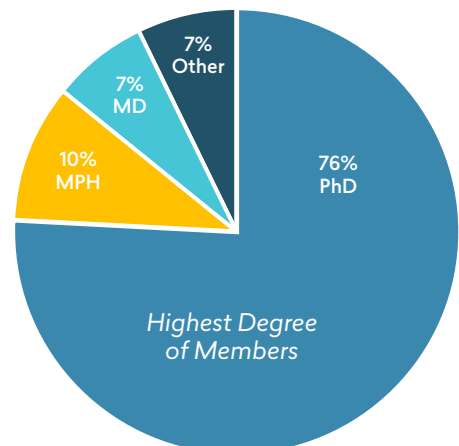

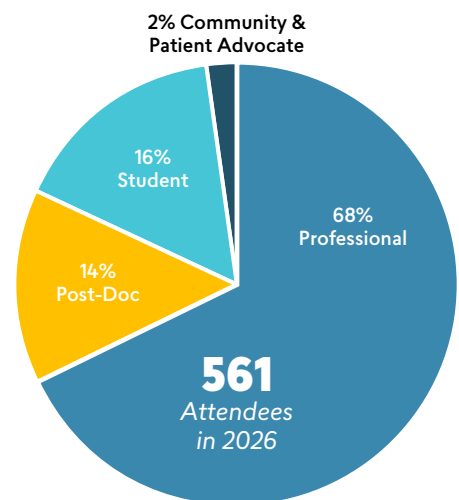

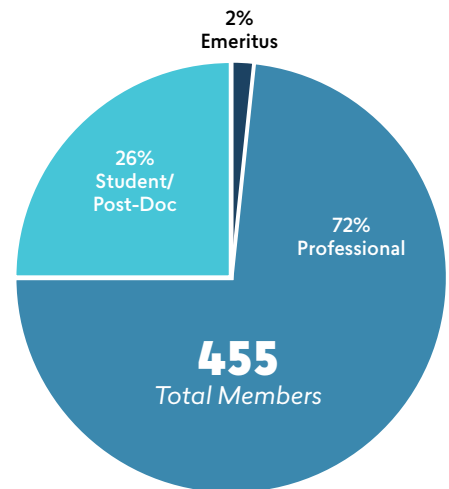

ABOUT ASPO'S 51ST ANNUAL MEETING

The American Society of Preventive Oncology is the only professional society dedicated solely to cancer prevention research. We are a community of more than 450 investigators, cancer center directors, program leaders, patient advocates, and other cancer prevention and control professionals from cancer centers and community organizations all over the country working together to exchange scientific information to reduce the cancer burden.

With more than 500 attendees, ASPO's Annual Meeting brings together scientists, graduate students, postdoctoral trainees, and community and patient advocates to share knowledge and advances in cancer prevention. Our 51st Annual Meeting will be hosted at the Emory Conference Center in Atlanta, Georgia, April 11-13, 2027. With the meeting theme of "Susceptibility to Survivorship," the meeting will highlight multidisciplinary approaches to prevention and control for childhood, AYA and early-onset cancers. Our scientific program committee, led by Dr. Philip Lupo and Dr. Kimberly Miller, committee co-chairs, is creating a stimulating program for the 2027 Annual Meeting that features not only childhood, AYA and early onset cancer focus, but fully embraces science along the cancer prevention and control continuum.

As an exhibitor, you get a fixed meeting point for new and further discussions with your current or potential future partners and customers.

Please consider becoming an exhibitor and joining us in the quest to prevent cancer.
